Happy summer time, Lifelong Learners,

We are officially half way through 2020. That's celebration in itself! I know you are eager to hear about our fall plans, and we promise a decision will be made by Aug. 1 on how we will convene. Look for a survey in late July. We will poll you on your comfort level for gatherings and online learning. Until then, know that we will come together one way or another this fall! Registration for the fall term will begin Aug. 15. More details to come about our new website and registration process.

I've been meaning to tell you! If you enjoy these emails and want to share them with others, they may be accessed on our website.

Check out this week's featured online learning resources:

1. LibriVox: Free public domain audiobooks
2. Math Better Explained: Math lessons for lasting insight
3. You are not so smart: A fun exploration of the ways you and everyone else tends to develop an undeserved confidence in human perception, motivation, and behavior.

Never tried listening to podcasts before? Click here for some guidance! Listening to Podcasts Beginners Guide

Stay tuned - new online resources each week!

Thanks OLLI @ UCONN and Janet Alexandersson on Medium.com for the suggestions!

To wash the food, or not to wash the food, that is the question!

Mashed is a fun website that includes the most interesting off the wall articles about anything to do with food and the food industry. Check out this article on foods that you should and should not be washing.

Having some wanderlust? Spartanburg travel company Explore Up Close is sharing interesting local history through photography and video as part of their "Virtual Travel" series. This week, learn the story of some "Revolutionary" Presbyterians who hailed from Northern Ireland - and made a new home in Chester County, SC: Virtual Travel Video - A Northern Ireland Presbyterian Heritage. Explore from home by subscribing to their weekly Virtual Travel series: www.exploreupclose.com.
More Ideas for traveling when you can’t actually travel
As the number of people testing positive for COVID-19 in our area increases, you may want to continue to stick close to home. Forbes created a creative list of ideas of things to do when social distancing that will keep you busy and engaged. My favorite is to dive down a rabbit hole! What is yours?

Riddle for the week: What can you keep even after giving it away?

Brain Games!
The brain is such a mystery! But these insightful Brain Games help you understand just how amazing it really is. Enjoy these short clips from the TV series Brain Games from National Geographic.

Here is an idea for you. Clean that junk drawer!
With time on your hands, why not take the challenge and clean out your junk drawer and see what kind of things are filling that drawer that you just could not throw away. My new favorite website, It's A Southern Thing has a list of the oddest things ever found in junk drawers. Can you out odd these?

Looking to volunteer your time?
Lifelong Learning at Wofford has purchased a new online registration and program management software called CampusCE. Starting Aug. 1, all members will be asked to login to the new system and create their own profile. If you are interested in helping to test the new system, and then help others who may have questions as they create their profiles and navigate the online course catalog, please reach out to Lucy Woodhouse at 864-597-5304 or by email at woodhousels@wofford.edu. You can do most from home or come into the office practicing social distancing and wearing a mask.

Please let us know:
Have you found an online or local resource that you want to share with your Wofford Lifelong Learning community? Please, let us know! Visit our Facebook page and leave a comment or email us at LifelongLearning@Wofford.edu.

Riddle Answer: Your word.

Stay safe and stay healthy. Please wear your mask in public places. We want to see you soon.

To register for a course or event, please call 864-597-4415 or visit wofford.edu/lifelonglearning.

To propose a course or contact the director, please call 864-597-5304 or email Lucy Woodhouse, director of Lifelong Learning.