Assistant Professor of Economics

The Department of Economics at Wofford College invites applications for two full-time, tenure-track positions at the rank of assistant professor of economics in any field to start in September 2020.

QUALIFICATIONS:
A Ph.D. in economics (or closely related) is required by the time of appointment; however, consideration will be provided for ABD candidates with expectation of completion by September 2020. For one of the two positions, preference will be given for qualified candidates with experience in macroeconomics and money and banking.

EXPECTATIONS:
The normal teaching load for Wofford faculty is three courses per semester, plus a course in our January Interim term (beginning in the second year; learn more about this program at https://www.wofford.edu/interim). The successful candidates will be encouraged to propose and teach new courses to complement the department’s offerings. The ability to engage in high quality teaching is essential. We also expect an active and ongoing research program, and we are especially interested in candidates whose research is conducive to collaboration with students and other faculty. Finally, the successful candidates will be expected to serve the department and college through committee work and through student advising and engagement. To earn tenure, faculty are expected to demonstrate excellence in teaching, continued scholarly development and service to the college.

APPLICATION:
Required application materials include a cover letter, CV, one working paper, teaching portfolio (statement of teaching philosophy, course evaluations and syllabi as applicable) and three letters of reference through JOE. All required application materials must be received by Dec. 2, 2019, to receive assured consideration. Review of candidates will continue until the positions are filled. Questions may be directed to the Economics Search Committee Chair at econjobs@wofford.edu.
