PROFESSOR or INSTRUCTOR of SOCIOLOGY

The Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Wofford College invites applications for a professor or instructor of sociology.

EXPECTATIONS
The Professor or Instructor will teach one, two or three courses in the spring semester. Classes begin on Feb. 3, 2020, and final grades are due by May 18, 2020.

We seek Instructors for two sections of Introduction to Sociology and one of the following catalog courses: Introduction to Sociology; Sociology of Criminal and Deviant Behavior; Social Research; Sex and Gender Across Cultures; Sex, Gender, and Family; and Social Movements. Course descriptions can be found in the Sociology and Anthropology Catalog (http://catalog.wofford.edu/courses-programs-departments/sociology/#coursestext).

QUALIFICATIONS
A Ph.D. in sociology is desired. ABD candidates wishing to broaden their teaching experiences also are strongly encouraged to apply.

APPLICATION
For full consideration, please submit the following application materials to fowlerct@wofford.edu. Priority will be given to applications received by Nov. 7, 2019, but we will accept applications until the position is filled.

- Cover letter that includes a statement on teaching philosophy and practice.
- Curriculum vitae.
- Unofficial graduate transcript.
- Contact information (names, phone numbers, and emails) for three professional references.

ABOUT US
The Department of Sociology and Anthropology “enables students to immerse themselves in the study of society and culture.” The department values scholarship related to indigenous worldviews, indigenous ways of knowing, social theory, research methodologies, social justice, social inequality, cultural studies or different substantive foci such as Indigenous communities, decolonization, education, social movements, political economy and community engagement.

The department acknowledges and respects the Cherokee and Catawba people and their predecessors who are the traditional custodians of the land where the Wofford College campus sits. Native Americans comprise 0.23% of Spartanburg’s current population, which totals more than 37,000 people including nearly equal percentages of African-American (47.49%) and white (48.18%) residents. Latinx, Asians, Native Hawaiians and Pacific Islanders also live in the city. Neighboring cities are Greenville, S.C., just a half-hour drive away; Charlotte, N.C., and Asheville, N.C., about an hour away; and Atlanta, Ga.; and Charleston, S.C., approximately three hours away. South Carolina is known for its beautiful rivers, lakes, beaches and forests. Jones Gap State Park, Table Rock State Park, Caesar’s Head State Park, Sumter National Forest and more public lands are in our Upstate region.