

A Will to Preach

The Rev. Dr. Will Willimon '68 is well known for delivering memorable sermons. A new documentary will provide an inside look at how Willimon gets from idea to the polished final product.

"A Will to Preach" is scheduled to air on SCETV at 9:30 tonight. "A Conversation with Will Willimon," a 30-minute interview, will follow at 10 p.m.

Susie Films, a Davidson, North Carolina-based company, produced the documentary. Willimon, professor of the practice of Christian ministry at the Duke University Divinity School, said it was "weird" trying to conduct business as usual with a film crew in tow.

"In the opening shot I enter a Duke classroom saying, 'As you know, I always have a film crew follow me through the day,'" Willimon says. The videographers "were a group of seasoned professionals who made it seem a bit less weird," he adds.

The documentary follows Willimon through his process for building a sermon – from reading scripture and commentaries, to conversations – and then delivering it at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Salisbury, North Carolina. It includes interviews with family, friends and colleagues, as well as clips from previous sermons.
